LAGER.

Lager beer is prepared by a slow process of fermentation from strong infusions of malt, barley, and hops, and grape sugar or glucose. It is usually fermented in Winter, as it requires a temperature of not more than from 40 to 50 degrees Fah.; and in hot weather the rooms must be cooled by means of ice or ice machines.

This kind of fermentation is what is called sedimentary or under, in contradistinction to ordinary or surface—the scum of yeast collecting at the bottom instead of the surface, so that the air has free access and and the gluten is more completely converted into yeast. The bottom yeast is quite different from ordinary yeast, and has a tendency to induce the kind of fermentation by which it was produced.

The following is brief outline of the process employed at one of the largest breweries in New York:

The barley is placed in wooden cisterns, covered with water, and allowed to remain two or three days, the water being changed once in twenty-four hours. It is then drained, and is subsequently thrown out in heaps on stone floors, where it heats spontaneously and soon germinates, throwing out rootlets and shoots and evolving part of its absorbed water—sweating. It is then spread and the germination proceeds from six to ten days, until the rootlets become brownish; then spread and tossed to cool and check fermentation. It is then put into large brick ovens or kilns to dry at about 125 degrees.

It is now malt. It is crushed by passing between large rollers, then transferred to the mash tubs, where it is stirred with water at 120 to 140 degrees, boiling gradually being added until heated to about 170. The infusion or wort stands until the suspended matters settle, when it is drawn off, and a second wort obtained by treating the residuum with hot water. The first wort is boiled with hops, the second is then let in, and the whole boiled about four hours. It is then run into the cooler, and quickly chilled to between 44 and 50 degrees, by running over small pipes through which cold water is running. As soon as cooled it is run into fermenting tubs, where it is mixed with one gallon of yeast for every 20 to 25 barrels. Fermentation continues for about 20 days. At first there is a heavy froth, which soon subsides leaving the surface clear. At the end of this period it is racked into hogheads, the yeast remaining at the bottom of the tubs. The hogsheads stand with bungs open until a few days before the beer is put into barrels for use, when the bungs are driven in to make carbonic acid for life. Three varieties of beer are made.

1. "Lager," or Summer beer, is prepared from the following: Water, 1 barrel; malt, 3 bushels; hops, 1½ to 3 pounds; yeast, ½ pint.

Grape sugar or glucose can be made to substitute part of the malt, and is commonly used for this purpose; in some cases to fully one-fourth of the malt weight. Lager is usually stored from four to eight months.

2. "Schenk," or Winter beer: Water, 1 barrel; malt, 2 to 3 bushels; hops, 1 lb; yeast, about ½ pint.

It is ready for use in from four to six weeks.

3. "Bock," an extra strong beer, made in small quantities and served to customers in the Spring, during the interval between giving out Schenk beer and the tapping of the lager.

Bock requires about two months in its preparation.

Starch, grape sugar or glucose, glycerine, and molasses are not unfrequently introduced into beer to replace part of the malt, while pine bark, quassia, walnut leaf, bitter cloves, wormwood, aloes, etc., are sometimes used to neutralize acidity or conceal dilution.

The color of beer depends much upon the care with which the malt is handled and the temperature with which it is kiln dried. 90 to 100 degrees produce pale malt 120 to 125 degrees, amber. Above this the malt becomes brown, and the wort produced from it has a similar color. The malt should be dried so that every part of it becomes crisp.—Scientific American.

The newspaper advertisement, an exchange truthfully says, is a never tiring worker in the interest of its employer.—When the bill-distributor has disappeared from the street, and the bills trampled into pulp, the advertisement is performing its silent mission in the family circles. It appears to a constituency three or four times larger than the actual sale of the paper, for there are few newspapers that do not pass from hand to hand among three or four persons with every issue.

Oatmeal, as is well known, is a food of great strength and nutrition, having claims to be better known and more widely used than it is at present. Of much service as a brain food, it contains phosphorus enough to keep a man doing an ordinary amount of brain work in health and vigor. All medical authorities unite in the opinion that eaten with milk it is a perfect food, having all the requisites for the development of the system.

Mrs. Jenkins is a clever old lady, and means well, but sometimes gets the wrong word. She hit it pretty close though, yesterday, when she said the storm looked omnibus for the horse railroad.—Lowell Citizen.

CHAPIN AS A WORKER.

Like Theodore Parker, Chapin undoubtedly felt his vitality to be so immense that it could not be overtasked. Parker came of a long-lived race, but he died of overwork at fifty. Chapin seemed made for infinite endurance, but he was shaken at sixty, and he died at sixty-six. Some years ago, in the height of his prosperous lecturing career, the Easy Chair met him at the Albany railroad station in the early evening of a winter day. He was snatching "a bite" and a cup of coffee, and as the bell rang, they hurried to the train, Chapin carrying a lumbering bag and shawls, and laughing and joking as they climbed into the car. He had been out all the week, starting early on Monday morning, after preaching twice on Sunday. He had lectured every evening during the week, traveling hard all day. "Up before light," he said, gayly, "eating tons of tough steaks and bushels of cold apples, whizzing on in these stifling cars, and turning out just in time to swallow a cup of tea, and off to the lecture." It was tremendous work, as only the fully initiated know. But he made it all a joke, and his tongue flew humorously on from incident to incident, and presently began to discuss the new books and the new articles in the magazines, with sharp and just discrimination. Suddenly the train stopped, evidently not at a station. The night was cold and stormy. Presently the conductor passed, and Chapin asked to know the reason of the delay. The conductor replied that there was some derangement of the locomotive; and Chapin said quickly, "This is bad business for a man who has to preach at eleven o'clock tomorrow morning, and whose sermon is not begun." His companion remonstrated; but Chapin's eyes twinkled as he answered: "Oh, you laymen know nothing about it. Burns sung the cotter's Saturday night, but the ministers' Saturday night is yet unwritten. At least," he said, laughing, "this one is likely to be unwritten." It was past midnight when the train reached the city. "Go home, and go to bed; I'm going to work." The next time the Easy Chair met the preacher, it asked about the sermon. "Oh, that was all right. I went home, and there was a bright fire in my study, and a brew of hot coffee, and I finished that sermon just as the sun rose." And the next morning probably he was off again for another week of the same kind.

It was at the same Albany station that, crossing in the bleak winter night over the frozen river, Theodore Parker was fatally chilled. He and Chapin were both stalwart men, with such ample and overflowing strength that it seemed to them to be exhaustless. But they worked bravely while it was yet day, and their works do follow them.—Editor's Easy Chair, in Harper's Magazine for March.

MATURE REFLECTION.—"My darling, have you thought of the happy Summer that our lives will be when we are joined for better or for worse?"

"Oh! yes, John, I've thought of it."

"And have you thought of the bright home that we will build on the foundation of our affection, and which will be painted with the dying flashes of the sun and furnished with the silver and gold that makes the night of the heavens beautiful?"

"Oh! yes, John, I've thought of it."

"Have you thought of the years that will come to us across the sea of time, white capped, but blue with years to come?"

"Sure's you're born, John, I've thought of it."

"And have you thought——? have you ——? have——?"

"Oh! yes, John, more than all the rest, and John, let us name it after you."

A SURVEYOR'S MARK.—A civil engineer was running and locating the lines of a lot of land below the city of Augusta, Ga., and used as assistance a deed to the property drawn 120 years ago. In one section of the deed it was recorded that the line touches a certain point where stands an old beach tree, and upon which a cross mark has been made with an ax. The engineer ran this line to an old beech tree, and, concluding that this was the point in question, looked for the mark but of course could not find it. Taking an ax he cut into the tree at a point he thought the mark might be, and, to his surprise, he chipped out a block and there was the identical mark referred to in the ancient document of 120 years ago. The mark was perfect, but had been covered up. At that time this was a British colony, and some years before the Revolutionary war. The deed was drawn in 1759.

A leading resident of a New York village went to Utica with his wife on a shopping tour. After finishing their purchases the husband deposited them in his vehicle and drove off home, leaving his wife in the store, forgetting to take her home.

Happiness is much more equally divided than most of us imagine. One man shall possess most of the materials, but little of the thing; another may possess much of the thing, but very few of the materials.

Carpenter and Choate.

A correspondent of New York Sun relates the following incident:

Mr. Carpenter studied law with Rufus Choate, and revered his memory with filial devotion. Choate loved him greatly, and predicted for him a career not less brilliant than his own. When the young student graduated from his office he drew up for him a great list of costly books which he said he would need in his Western practice. Carpenter could have bought the State of Massachusetts just as readily as he could have bought that list. But Choate astonished him still more when he said: "You will draw on my purse for these books, and for all your other wants, until you are established. Take all you need; it does my heart good to give it to you." He would take no notes or other evidences of Carpenter's indebtedness. The money was scrupulously repaid to last cent, but with some difficulty, for Choate would forget, or pretend to forget and generously denied important items in the account.

Like Carpenter, Choate was perfectly content as long as he had anything at his banker's; but a notice from that grim personage that his account was overdrawn would throw him into the most unreasonable agitation, although thousands might be due him from clients perfectly able and willing to pay. The writer recollects vividly a characteristic anecdote of Choate, characteristically told by Carpenter. Carpenter went to see Choate at his house on some business of the office, and found him alone in his library in the second story. He lay on a lounge chatting freely of everything but the matter his student had come about, and managed to put that by whenever it was approached. At length he said—"Open that sideboard, my boy, and take out the decanter and glasses you find there, and we'll comfort ourselves with a drink." But no sooner had Carpenter obeyed these directions than a footstep was heard on the stairway, furtive, timid but steadily approaching. Choate listened an instant, with a merry glitter in his eye, and then cried: "Hustle them! Hustle them in! Methinks it hath a Presbyterian sound."—But the intruder turned out to be an Episcopalian clergyman; the decanter reappeared, and Carpenter left without being able even to mention the business upon which he had gone.

AFTER THE INAUGURATION.—Mr. Micawber is in town.

"He is looking for something to turn up.

He believes he would like a Postoffice.

There is no man in his community more available for Collector.

In case he is not appointed Collector he would make a good Appraiser.

Or a special agent.

Or a storekeeper.

But, in case no appointment is available just now, President Garfield will be so good as to make a note of his case.

Or get him a pass home.

"What is all this Beer war about in the Transvaal?" asked a Chicago man of a Cincinnati drummer, and the latter, bloated with information, answered:

"They want a Cincinnati tariff of three cents a glass, and they'll die for it sooner than give up."

BRIDGEPORT, APRIL 2, 1881.

SAN FRANCISCO AGENCY.—L. P. Fisher, 21 Merchants' Exchange, is our Agent, and is authorized to contract for advertising, receive subscriptions and make collections on our account.

EXTRA SESSION.—The Legislature will assemble in extra session on Monday next. The Governor, in his proclamation, limits the session to twenty days. They will be obliged to work pretty lively to do the work laid out by the Governor. He wants them to pass the following bills: The general appropriation bill; a tax bill; the apportionment bill, and a road law; and expects the Senate to act on his appointments. Each bill has to be read through when introduced, then it goes to the printer and a committee, and after it gets back from the committee it must be read the second and third times on separate days before final passage. This will be the programme in each house, and allowing three days to each bill in each branch it will be noticed that the members will have no time for long-winded speeches. That won't set Jo. Wasson back a particle.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Republicans now see the mistake made by their retiring President in vetoing the Funding bill. Outside of placing an unnecessary tax amounting to $1,000,000 monthly upon the people, no better time has ever been known than now, to float bonds bearing a low rate of interest, and even should an extra session pass a similar Funding bill to the vetoed one, the time may have gone past in which it could have been floated. Another matter which should receive the attention of Congress should be a policy in relation to inter-oceanic canals and ship railways. It is time an assertion should be made of the right and power of the United States to control any canal between the oceans, no matter by what nation constructed. It would be nothing more nor less than the enunciation of the Monroe Doctrine, a doctrine dear to every native born American. Besides there are hundreds of other just measures that were killed or died with the last Congress, that should be re-introduced and passed.

If it were only some measures by which the weather could be controled, what a blessing it would be. At present the weather is badly out of joint.

Among the persons named for Speaker of the next House of Representatives, none have more claim on the Republican party than has the Hon. D. C. Haskell of Kansas. Mr. Haskell has served as Speaker of the House in Kansas, and was universally praised for his fine executive abilities as a presiding officer. He labored zealously and effectually for the great Republican majority Kansas polled last November.

Kansas, the young giant of the west, with a population of a round million, with her 60,000 Republican majority, and with her thousands of active, energetic, practical broard-guaged men. Kansas, the banner Republican State should not be ignored. So far, she has been given the cold shoulder. The Republican party owes her much, for it was the free soil of Kansas that gave rise to that party, it was that struggle, fought out to the bitter end, that connected the hearts and hands of every freedom-loving son of America, which culminated in the election of Lincoln; the striking off of the shackles that had for centuries torn and festered the bodies and souls of 4,000,000 human beings; the blotting out forever of that stigma upon free institutions, that practically gave the lie to our glittering claims that we were a free people. Kansas, for twenty years has been a strong Republican State, and in all that has never been represented in the council of the Nation, and her claims have never been recognized. Her sister State, Iowa, is well represented, and the placing of Mr. Haskell in the Speaker's chair would be but a slight recognition by the party of the services rendered by the State which he in part now so ably represents.

The appointment of Hon J. G. Blaine to the head of the State Department was taken at the time to mean a change in the foreign policy of the United States and its dealings with foreign Governments, and Americans generally congratulated themselves in the fact that at last we had a man at the head of the Department, through which, more than any other, the princes, powers, and potentates of the world are brought in official contact with the United States on whom they could rely for the vindication of American honor and the protection of American interests wherever, whenever and however assailed. Just how this change in policy was to be brought about, and the exact manner in which the Secretary was intending to get his work in, was, until a few days ago, a question. The prompt and vigorous action the State Department took in the matter of refuting the damaging reports of the British consul at Philadelphia concerning one of the staple products and exports of this country, showed him to be alive to the commercial interests of the country, and the openly expressed opinion of the Secretary that an extra session of Congress would be justified on the ground alone of the necessity for an assertion by the legislative branch of the Government of the right, power and intention of the United States to control any canal between the two oceans, by whomsoever constructed, was an earnest of the broader policy of National self-assertion to be pursued under administration. Secretary Blaine believes in the Monroe Doctrine; or, to put it more broadly, in the right of the United States, as the leading power of the continents, to dominate both in all matters affecting its interests and that of its sister Republics in Central and South America.

CONKLING RAMPANT.

There promises to be a fierce contest between Senator Conkling and his friends, and President Garfield, as to who shall run this Government during the next four years—the Senator from New York, or the man selected by the people in November last to attend to that important matter. President Garfield has taken upon himself the task of selecting a man to act as Collector of the port of New York without consulting the Peacock Senator, and has naturally selected a friend of Garfield and of Blaine, and the Administration, instead of offering the position to one who is not well-disposed to either, but a staunch friend of the would-be Dictator, Roscoe Conkling. The President is the one who has the filling of the most important Federal offices, and the people will hold him, and not Roscoe Conkling, responsible for any short-comings of his appointees. We all know that President Grant was so held, and the bad appointments made during his last term made the people afraid to try him again in that position, and that responsibility insured his defeat at Chicago last Summer. Conkling left nothing undone to prevent the nomination of any one but Grant at Chicago, and during the entire campaign he was the most lukewarm Republican in the country, and it was just previous to the election that he showed any activity; and in view of these facts it would show better taste were he to allow the known friends of President Garfield in New York to fill the offices, or at least to recommend appointments. Of course, Mr. Conkling is an able man—a great man, as things run in this country—and has a large following in his own State, but the masses of the Republican party of the Union are not worshiping him at this time, and have not taken much stock in him since the late Presidential campaign. President Garfield has nominated Judge Wm. H. Robertson to be Collector of the port of New York. Judge Robertson has been a member of Congress from New York, and for twelve years was an honored Judge of that State; and now he is a member of the State Senate, which body, on hearing of his nomination, passed resolutions, thanking the President for the nomination, and requesting the U. S. Senate to confirm it. Conkling will try to prevent his confirmation, because the Judge was in the Chicago Convention and secured the nomination of Garfield over Grant. Efforts are being made to have the President withdraw the nomination in order to oppease Conkling. It is to be hoped that the President will stand by his friends and allow Roscoe Conkling to sit on the back seat, which he occupied during the campaign. James A. Garfield and James G. Blaine, with Robert T. Lincoln and James, can run this Administration without the dictation of Conkling, who, it is said, will wage a relentless war against the President.

Would Senator Conkling vote against confirming ex-Senator Sprague to a foreign mission?

Experiments are being made at the Washington Iron Works with pulvdrized coal. ADVERTISE
IN THE
BRIDGEPORT CHRONICLE-UNION

THE UNION.

BRIDGEPORT, APRIL 2, 1881.

JOB PRINTING.—Job printing of the finest description will be furnished at this office at Sacramento prices.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

DISCERNING.—The Free Press pays a well-merited compliment to the business discernment of the Bodie merchants, who, it says, sell their goods to Bridgeporters on a credit, while preferring to keep their goods in store, than to sell to a Bodieite without the cash in hand. We hope the credit of our cotem. has not "ginn out" also. So long as the Bodie merchants continue to do business on such a basis and do Wright by all, that town will ever have a bright Page in her history, and her merchants will "hold the Fort" and ever be Beddy to Ward off the Sheriff and Constable if they continue to advertise in the BRIDGEPORT CHRONICLE-UNION—"the best advertising medium in Mono county"—and in the meantime our Bridgeport merchants will do up their business Brown and make their Hays, whether the sun shines, or not.

FRYINGPAN ARISTOCRACY.—San Francisco, Oakland and Sacramento have their bonanza kings, shoddy and codfish aristocracy and this week, judging from the rush from Bodie and this town to Fryingpan Gulch, we felt that we would soon have among us a fryingpan aristocracy before another festive season set in; but, alas! we will have to await the rush of business at the Court House, and a hot Summer that will make a boom in lager in Bodie before we may be so blessed. The gulch don't pan out as well as the prospectors hoped for.

THE FRYING PAN.—A slight flurry rippled the mining circles for a few days this week regarding the Frying Pan mines, and a few parties went to the district and located. Although a ledge has not been discovered, there is good paying rock lying around which resembles the Comstock. This district is, air-line, ten miles northwest from Bridgeport, and 18 miles by Sweetwater route—15 by road and 3 by trail. It is hardly worth a craze now.

GOSSIPING.—Last evening Mad. Luna and Venus looked very fascinating promenading together in the western heavens. They were evidently gossiping about Mother Earth, for keeping so close a watch on Venus. They will meet again this evening, but will not be quite so intimate, and during the month Luna will outshine her beautiful rival.

PERSONAL.—Yesterday A. F. Bryant went to Sweetwater in a private conveyance to meet Count De Cousy, a French gentleman who comes to Mono to look at our mines. We believe he is interested in the Spaulding and Oro mines at Bodie. Mr. Bryant will probably return with his visitor this evening.

SAD ACCIDENT.—At 10 o'clock this forenoon the capstan-bar, used in moving the saloon of Wm. A. Loose, broke, and the rebound broke the thigh bone of Uriah Mayfield—"Kentuck." He was taken to the County Hospital, at Bodie.

MORE SHOOTING.—After a short respite, Bodie again looms into notoriety by shots from the revolver. This time it is a fracas between two disreputable men in a house on the noted Bonanza street. Both were shot—one dangerously. Price, the assailant, was arrested.

THOSE EGGS.—As the hayseeders of Mono wish to set the eggs of a tailor's goose under an English 'N, will the funny man of the Bodie Free Press tell us what the plural of a tailor's goose is—that is, if he is on speaking terms with his tailor.

THE FUNDS.—With the exception of the General Fund, all others are on a cash basis and the bills to be allowed next May will be paid. The General Fund is $35,000 behind, and the bulk of it is for criminal business.

HAWTHORN ROAD.—The toll road between Bodie and Hawthorn is not what it has been represented to be. It is said to be a bad road for teaming; short turns, high tolls and water to be paid for, making it an unprofitable route for freighting.

COURTS.—Superior Court, Department No 1; Judge Briggs, presiding, will open on Monday next; and Department No 2 Judge Wiggins, presiding, will open on next Monday week.

NEW SUIT.—Solomon Sichel has commenced suit, in San Francisco, against the Gipsy Queen Mining Company to recover $3,500 on a promissory note.

FOR FINE FRUIT go to E. F. Gibson's Union Fruit Market, Bodie. Oranges and lemons, and candies of every kind, fresh and good, always in store.

BOISTEROUS.—The weather this week has been boisterous, heavy winds having prevailed almost daily.

HAPPY.—About the happiest man in town is Grandpa Leavitt. Sam Hopkins would have been the happiest, had it been a boy.

REMOVAL.—Loose's saloon is being removed up town, opposite Leavitt's House, and near the new Court House.

STUBBLE.—Our farmers are clearing their land of sage brush and burning stubble.

COURT HOUSE.—The Court House has been accepted by the county.

Transfers of Real Estate.

The following deeds have been recorded in the County Recorder's office:

P. B. Taylor, Sheriff, to West & Bryant, interest of Boultinghouse and Tibbetts, to lot on Piety Hill, Bodie, $300.

Mar. 30.

D. O. Waltze, A. D. Waltze and M. M. Waltze to Wm. Pearson & John Pearson' lot on Lowe street, Bodie, $600.

Mining Transfers.

The following deeds have been recorded in the County Recorder's office:

Mar. 30.

Geo. W. Butterfield to Chas. H. Eaton to ¼ of Bryant mine, Homer, $2,269 50.

Mar. 31.

J. C. Kemp to O. H. Brooks, interest in Great Sierra, formerly Mt. Dana mine, Mono and Tuolumne counties.

NARROW ESCAPE—Architect J. R. Roberts had a narrow escape from death on Monday last, on his way home from Bodie. His horse, becoming frightened by the throwing of cord wood on the road, threw him and dragged him some distance, but fortunately the sole of his overshoe was torn off, which released him.

ON DIT.—That another paper is to be published here. As we are living on two crackers a day and a cup of water, we shall retrench to one cracker and a half cup of water.

COMFORTABLE.—Hereafter the outsiders in the Superior Court Rooms will be comfortable seated, the old back-breaking benches making way for railway settees.

TIME.—The Board of Supervisors ought to provide the Superior Courts and Clerk's office with clocks, and we presume it will.

GOOD ORDER.—The Big Meadows and Bodie toll road is in first-rate condition, having in many places been widened and otherwise improved.

DEEDS.—During the month of March 50 deeds, 24 real estate and 26 mining, were recorded in the County Recorder's office.

THANKS.—We are indebted to Senator Farley for a copy of the Congressional Directory, corrected to December 10, 1880.

CALIFORNIA AND NEVADA RAILROAD.—J. C. McTarnahan, the well known engineer, who was connected with the preliminary survey of the projected Nevada and Oregon Railroad from Reno to Bodie, last summer, arrived here Wednesday evening, and it is reported that he will be retained by the California and Nevada Railroad Company, recently incorporated, to survey and locate the eastern division of the road from Oakland to Bodie. Mr. McTarnahan is also engaged in making arrangements to open and work the old Dog Town or Mono diggings on a large scale. The railroad is now being built out through the city of Oakland, and the note of preparation would seem to indicate that work is to be commenced on this end of the line at an early day.—Bodie Free Press April 1st.

HARPER'S MONTHLY.—The April number of this household favorite is beautifully illustrated, and its readers are favored with an unusual variety of entertaining reading matter. The profusely illustrated article on "The Green Mountains in Sugar-Time" will remind the old Californian of his boyish days, when he had his favorite maple tree and a little trough to catch the sap.—The general reader will also be interested in the article on "Indian Education at Hampton and Carlisle," and with "Italian Life in New York," both fully illustrated The ladies will be absorbed in "Art Embroidery." There is also an illustrated paper on "Milwaukee," and many other subjects, with a novel or two thrown in. The investment of $4 for a year's subscription to this magazine will bring a rich return.—Published by Harper Brothers, New York.

NEW PATENTS.—Dewey & Co., Scientific Press Patent Agency, has received official notice of the issue of the following patents to Pacific coast inventors:

Vehicle spring, G. G. Buckland, Tulare; water wheel, C. J. Collins, Grass Valley; lemon squeezer, R. H. Daly, S. F.; wool washer, J. T. Davis, S. F.; sawing machine, G. M. & N. The roof of the Methodist church at Eureka, Nev., is made of old tin cans. The Sentinel says; "The number of oyster cans used was 2,265. Each piece of tin passed through the hands of the manufacturer thirteen times, which shows that the pieces were handled 81,818 times. The cost to the consumers of such luxuries as the cans contained amounted to $2,351 30.

Thirty of the Carson Mint operatives have been suspended owing to the fact that sufficient silver cannot be secured by the Department to keep the Mint running on full time. HOUSE AND FARM.

POULTRY.—It takes some time to convince the farming community of the advantages of raising prime fowl stock. Indeed the farm, generally speaking, is the last place the amateur or novice would go to look for a good specimen of any breed. In the last few years, however, much has been done toward improvement, and the prospects are that in time the improved breeds will take the place of common kinds on every homestead

Sometimes we are charitably inclined to be moderate in our remarks, when we come to remember that in times past, the live stock of the country, though degenerate, was the best we had, but now-a-days everybody that is inclined can purchase good fowls of any of the improved breeds at reasonable prices.

Poultry has been considered unprofitable by some farmers on account of the poor quality of the fowls and the loose way of caring for them. We are willing to acknowledge the truth of this statement, when we know how farmers generally care for their poultry stock. It is indeed a miserable mockery and a heartless attempt at keeping fowls. And unless they follow a more sensible way of raising poultry, we fear they will not appreciate good stock when they come to supplant the common sorts,

We have frequently urged our farmer friends to keep prime poultry stock on the farm. They have the land, the surplus grain, the vegetables and the natural facilities for growing good stock.

The stirring of the soil in the dryest, hottest weather is very useful. One may readily perceive this on an examination, in very dry weather, of the soil of a garden or field which has been frequently stirred and that under a sod or on a road. The former will be found moist, from the surface downward, while the latter will be hard and perfectly dry. On the return of wet weather the condition of the cultivated soil is favorable to the immediate absorption of the rain, while the hard soil by its dryness and hardness repels the water, which flows over and away from it without moistening it. This is a fact that may be studied with advantage, for one never learns anything so well and remembers it so permanently as when he has personally investigated and seen for himself.

The progressive farmer will try to better himself. He will curtail his expenses so as to have large sales, though small profits from each acre; he will get books and papers that will give him useful hints about his business; he will try to find some crop and market where he can sell at good prices without much competition. The sluggish farmer will take things as they come, and cry hard times and in the race of life will be left behind.

LOCKJAW.—A correspondent of the Scientific American says: "Let any one who has an attack of lockjaw take a small quantity of turpentine, warm it and pour it on the wound, no matter where the wound is, and relief will follow in less than a minute.—Nothing better can be applied to a severe cut or bruise than cold turpentine; it will give certain relief almost instantly. Turpentine is also a sovereign remedy for croup. Saturate a piece of flannel with it and place the flannel on the throat and chest, and in every case three or four drops on a lump of sugar may be taken inwardly."

Excessive drinking of water by farm animals is said to increase the consumption of fat in the body. Too watery fodder and too much drinking should be avoided, especially in fattening, if we wish to obtain the most rapid and abundant formations of flesh and fat.

Cooper's liquid glue, gum arabic and white sugar, equal parts, with a sufficient quantity of hot water, will make a mucilage which can be moistened like a postage stamp.

Sulphur and glycerine, mixed to a paste, are a sure cure for cracked hoofs. Put the paste on at night, and in the morning put on plain glycerine.

If you want your children to be graceful, let them be unconscious; if you want them to be healthy, let them be sufficiently warm.

A gentleman, not unknown in literary circles was present at one of the Pope's receptions. The holy father approached him and said, "You are an American. Are you a Catholic or a Protestant?" "Holy father," responded our friend, "I am neither a Catholic nor a Protestant. I am a journalist."

"Why, I'm so glad you've come. Did you know that I've been worrying about you, John, all the evening?" "That's just what I married you for. It is pleasant to think there is some one home worrying about you."

The Detroit Free Press says that "there is really no pain in having a tooth pulled. It is the soft, mild way in which the dentist clatters his bushel of tools that makes a fellow think the top of his head is being pulled off."

Physic, for the most part, is nothing else but the substitute of exercise and temperance.
